Witch Coal For Manitoba

A new threat to Alberta's coal markets in Manitoba and Saskatchewan is seen in the arrival of two ships which recently docked at Port Churchill, Manitoba's export in the making. The ships included in their cargoes coal from Wales, destined for Winnipeg. When grain handling facilities are completed at Port Churchill and this port becomes a busy grain shipping point, if the Hudson Bay route proves commercially successful - Welsh coal may become a strong competitor of Alberta coal in the two western prairie provinces. Travelling to Liverpool with loads of wheat, ships would return laden with man-made goods. Coal would be carried for ballast, and thus could be laid down at Churchill at a cheap rate. Alberta coal men will watch with interest the development of the Churchill trade.

FARMING

(By H. H. Housens)

Soil drifting in many parts of the prairie is a serious and disturbing problem. It has wrought such havoc financially that it is now a matter of life and death to the farmer who has the wheat that there are many who are turning to a knowledge of the fact that there is a practical and comparatively inexpensive way of arresting further ravages of this threatening menace.

The Method Followed in Southern Alberta

The delegation of farmers who visited the strip farming area of southern Alberta were advised to look over the methods of Nobels and Monarch. The first call was therefore made at Nobels where the party was entertained by Mr. C. S. Noble, whose reputation for doing things agriculturally in a large way and doing it well, was well known.

After an hour's visit devoted to an inspection of the crop and trial plots on the Noble farm, the party returned to Nobels, where, under the cool and spacious veranda of his home, Mr. Noble addressed the group, dealing with some of the problems he had met in the matter of soil control.

He concluded his remarks with a convincing reference to the advantages of strip farming as an effective means of soil control. The party was also addressed by Mr. R. J. Hutchings, who is a farmer and a well known expert on the subject of soil control.

It would have been possible to have spent with profit a full day of the party's visit at the Nobels, but time and other considerations prevented this. The visit to the Nobels was a most profitable one, and the party returned to Basasso with a full knowledge of the methods of strip farming.

The brothers both state that strip farming is the method they then adopted. They then adopted strip farming as a means of soil control. They then adopted strip farming as a means of soil control.

A visit was then made to the 320-acre farm owned and operated by Cornelius A. Withage. This farm suffered nothing in comparison with that of his brother, Chris. The same method had been followed with equally good results.

On leaving Mr. Withage for a visit to the farm of Mr. Leonard Kooke, who is a farmer and a well known expert on the subject of soil control. The party was also addressed by Mr. R. J. Hutchings, who is a farmer and a well known expert on the subject of soil control.

Looking to the Future

Robert Gardner, M. P., president of the United Farmers of Alberta, says:

"Looking to the future I am confident that Alberta farmers will never be satisfied by any system of marketing that is not strictly co-operative in its basis, because no other system can meet their needs."

"By patronizing Pool elevators we can speed the day when the co-operative system will be firmly established as the normal method of handling our products."

SOIL DRIFTING

these young ladies, provided their services are still available.

It was the expressed conviction of the entire party that the day given over to inspection of the merits of strip farming had been well and profitably spent and that strip farming, involving as it does so little in extra expense, offers the quickest and safest means of soil control immediately available to the average farmer. As an evidence of the extent to which the method of soil control has been accepted with this delegation of practical farmers, it is interesting to note that at least ten thousand acres of land in central Alberta will be devoted to strip farming in 1932 as a result of attendance that can be directly traced to this tour of inspection.

The consensus of opinion among those best qualified to advise in this strip farming should be laid out, in alternate strips twenty rods wide and running north and south, to offer the best protection from prevailing winds. In extremely light sandy soils the strips should be reduced in width to meet the requirements of extreme conditions. At least five per cent of the strip farms in southern Alberta are laid out in strips twenty rods wide, running north and south.

Assuming for illustration that one half a section of land, one-half of which was in crop and one-half in fallow, one would naturally want to plant all fallow land in the following spring. This could be accomplished with reasonable safety from soil drifting by covering his fallow quarter in the many months heretofore being described, and if for cause he was unable to cover crop his fallow quarter, and was compelled to plant it in the fall as measured by results one year with usual way without any protection from the winds, he would simply be postulating for one season the hazard previously taken for years in respect to his summerfallow land.

His position in respect to the quarter in stubble would now be secure for it would be protected by the standing stubble. This quarter he would summerfallow in alternate strips twenty rods wide running north and south, which strips of fallow when completed would be fully protected by the immediate strips of stubble left for its protection. The following year he would simply repeat this procedure on the quarter then left in stubble, and his land would be fully prepared for strip farming in work the summerfallow, as Mr. Wilson says, "in the very best way we know, without fear whatever of its drifting or becoming a menace either to ourselves or neighbors, and that other measures or methods on the farm at such small extra outlay of time and effort would be worth so much in assurance, in protection and in peace of mind."

The strip method of farmers in southern Alberta have creditably and effectively taken the "out of gamble in the hazard of soil drifting and perilling the word in its metaphorical sense, have "landed" to a position of complete immunity from the disastrous and demoralizing effect of this expensive, devastating and wholly unnecessary evil.

BLAKE—in loving memory of Bill Blake who passed away Sept. 2, 1930.

His tired hands are folded in a last sweet rest,
Poor frame so weak and worn,
Dear heart that strove to be resigned
Yet bled for dear ones left behind.
Has reached for his home of rest;
So let him sleep that dreamless sleep,
Our sorrow cluster round his head,
Inerted by his loving wife and children who never can forget his kind words and loving smile.
